

NO PEGGING OF BRITISH WAGES

LONDON, April 9.—Britain has frozen the jobs of 2,000,000 workers, but there has been no government pegging of wages.

In comparing the United States and British systems, one official explained that the situation here is different in that there is no deferment from military service of married men with families.

Job freezing in Britain was done by trades and it is estimated that at least 35 per cent of the country's workers come under the government order.

Those not in work deemed war essential are free to move about, but most of those in military age, from 17 to 43, are in the army.

Ivy Project Is

Taken by Group

Of unusual interest is the Ivy project of the Twin Falls garden club meeting Wednesday at the Elmer C. Huns home. Each member purchased one ivy from the collection of 21 different varieties ordered for experiment.

Common locally is the hardy variety seen on many walls and chimneys. All evergreens and all hardy on some part of the globe. It is hoped that a public display can be arranged with the plants more fully developed.

Mrs. Tom Hicks read an article on English ivy and other vines especially those for indoor decoration. Mrs. Roy E. Baker spoke of the methods of propagation, outlining layering, rooting of soft and hard wood cutting and the common slip method.

Business decided with a renewal of the club's membership in the American Horticultural society and also a decision to conduct a flower show during June as usual.

New Food Chief Won't Mince Words if Outlook Is Gloomy

By HERMAN ALLEN

WASHINGTON, April 9.—Americans who wonder how Chester Davis will handle the food problem can be sure of one thing—if the outlook is dark he won't hesitate to say so. Washington newspapermen like him as a man who speaks straight, with no attempt to cover up what might be an unpopular situation.

Here's an example:

In 1935 Davis went to Europe "to size up a realistic view just what are the prospects for American farmers to sell more of their crops."

He returned with the frank report: "There is not the slightest hope we can reclaim for these markets we so mutilate the great markets we once enjoyed."

Chester Davis was born Nov. 17, 1897, on a farm in Iowa and awaited there all through his boyhood. In the fall of 1906 he moved to Grinnell college (also the alma mater of Harry Hopkins), working almost every spare minute to pay expenses and tuition.

The middle of his senior year he dropped out of school to go to South Dakota and run a couple of weekly papers. He returned to take a law degree in 1921. The next year he returned to Iowa and worked as far as a farmhand, Montana, where he met the persons who changed his entire life.

Progressive

One was Helen Smith, whom he married in 1913. The other was Joseph Dixon.

Dixon was a leading Progressive who finally rose to be governor over the bitter opposition of the political forces which had a hammerlock on the state government.

After four years Dixon's enemies had been elected the Montana Farmer, fighting not only for progress in agriculture but for good state government. Dixon named him commissioner of agriculture and labor.

After four years Dixon's enemies got the upper hand again, and Davis went to Illinois. There he associated himself with the National Farmers' Union.

His job was as "director of grain marketing" for the National Agricultural association, which meant, very simply, that he was a lobbyist.

As a young man, Davis had sailed under the Republican colors, but jumped ship in favor of Democratic James Cox in 1920 and Progressive "Plutonium" Bob La Follette in 1924.

When 1928 rolled around, he and Perk managed Al Smith's agricultural campaign; four years later they campaigned for Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Barred F. D. R.

When Roosevelt launched the new deal, Davis helped work out the agricultural adjustment act. Perk became administrator of the AAA, and Davis was director of its production division. The way he handled the sticky drafting of the act in the mid-30s and planned and executed

America Needs MORE SUGAR BEETS in 1943 from TWIN FALLS COUNTY

(The Nation's Best Sugar Beet County in 1942)

and the MAGIC VALLEY

America needs more sugar in 1943 for the biggest home-canning job on record (100 jars per person in Idaho); to maintain present minimum sugar rations for home, industry and boys on the fighting front.

USDA War Boards are asking for last year's sugar beet acreage... 11,000 acres for Twin Falls, Jerome, Gooding, and Lincoln counties... and 23,000 for the entire Magic Valley... Livestock feeders need the by-products to produce more meat and butterfats (the pulp and tops from an acre of beets equals alfalfa from one acre) and Magic Valley needs the five-million-dollar-a-year beet sugar industry with its benefits for all of us.
